Forecast for Sunday 12 Jun 2022

Weather: Early low cloud may cover the hill tops, and bring a little drizzle or light rain at times. However, this is expected to clear by 9 am to leave a dry bright day with some sunny intervals perhaps possible, mainly in the east of the Park. There is an outside chance of the odd fleeting light shower moving through later, however it should be largely dry.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 600m: Until 9 am: 20% with early cloud covering the hills down to 300m or so. After 9 am: 90% with fair weather cloud well above the summits.

Low cloud and visibility: Until 9 am. Low cloud likely down to 300m above sea level. This will cause patchy hill fog with visibilities down to 100m at times.
After 9am: Crystal clear visibility of distant hills up to 40 miles away.

Meteorologist's View

Breezy at height, making it feel cubstantially cooler than valley temperatures may suggest. The wearing of layers is advised as a result, as is adequate protection from the strong sun, with cloudy periods perhaps proving deceptive.
